Dick Island

22 acre private island

$2,350,000 Canadian

A beautiful example of a west coast private island with windswept rocky shoreline, protected bays, mossy bluffs and large trees.

Situated midway along the western shores of Texada Island, in the Strait of Georgia, 22 acre Dick Island enjoys fabulous southern and western exposure with views across the strait towards Vancouver Island. As an added bonus it is connected to the provincial power utility (BC Hydro) and has a domestic water license.

The island sits just outside the southern edge of Gillies Bay in very close proximity to Texada Island, connected by a sand spit that is walkable at low tides. Shelter Point Regional Park on Texada is across from the island, and there are two boat launches and parking nearby. There is regular ferry service from Powell River to Texada Island, and the small community of Gillies Bay offers services and amenities.

Never having been logged, the island boasts some old growth large cedar and fir as well as arbutus trees. The 4660ft of diverse shoreline offers everything from windswept mossy bluffs to oyster beach, walk-on sandy beach and small rock bays. The island has been modestly developed with two small cabins and some trails, but otherwise remains mostly in its natural state. A power line runs from Texada underground to the island and then across to the cabin site on the west side of the island.

The two small cabins are in a natural clearing on the west side of the island, with sweeping ocean vistas across to Vancouver Island providing great framing for sunsets. The smaller of the two is a 9ft x 8ft sleeping cabin (bunkie), with a built in bed platform and upper shelving. Large windows let in the light and a small, covered deck frames the split door. This is a very basic log cabin structure on a pad and post foundation with a metal roof.

The larger building is a 14ft x 20ft one room log cabin with wood decking. There are French doors out to the deck and large windows for good light throughout the space. The interior is designed with a kitchen, bedroom area, and living area with a woodstove. Domestic water is currently rain catchment, however there is a water license easement.

This building has power and water. Power is from a BC Hydro line that runs along a right of way from Texada Island to Dick Island at the spit. Domestic water is from a spring on Texada Island, with a license allowing for it to be piped to Dick Island. This is an excellent benefit!

Both cabins are in serviceable condition and could be used as temporary residences while building a main residence, or they could be updated and renovated into recreational cabins for continued use.

In the same location is a shed with an adjoining covered lean-to. The shed houses the main breaker and panel for the power, and there is power in the lean-to.

This island offers an opportunity to create a spectacular island estate, to be enjoyed for years to come.

Dick Island is located in the Strait of Georgia just south of Gillies Bay on the west side of Texada Island between Comox (Vancouver Island) and Powell River (the mainland) approximately 55 nautical miles from downtown Vancouver and 20 miles from Comox Harbour.

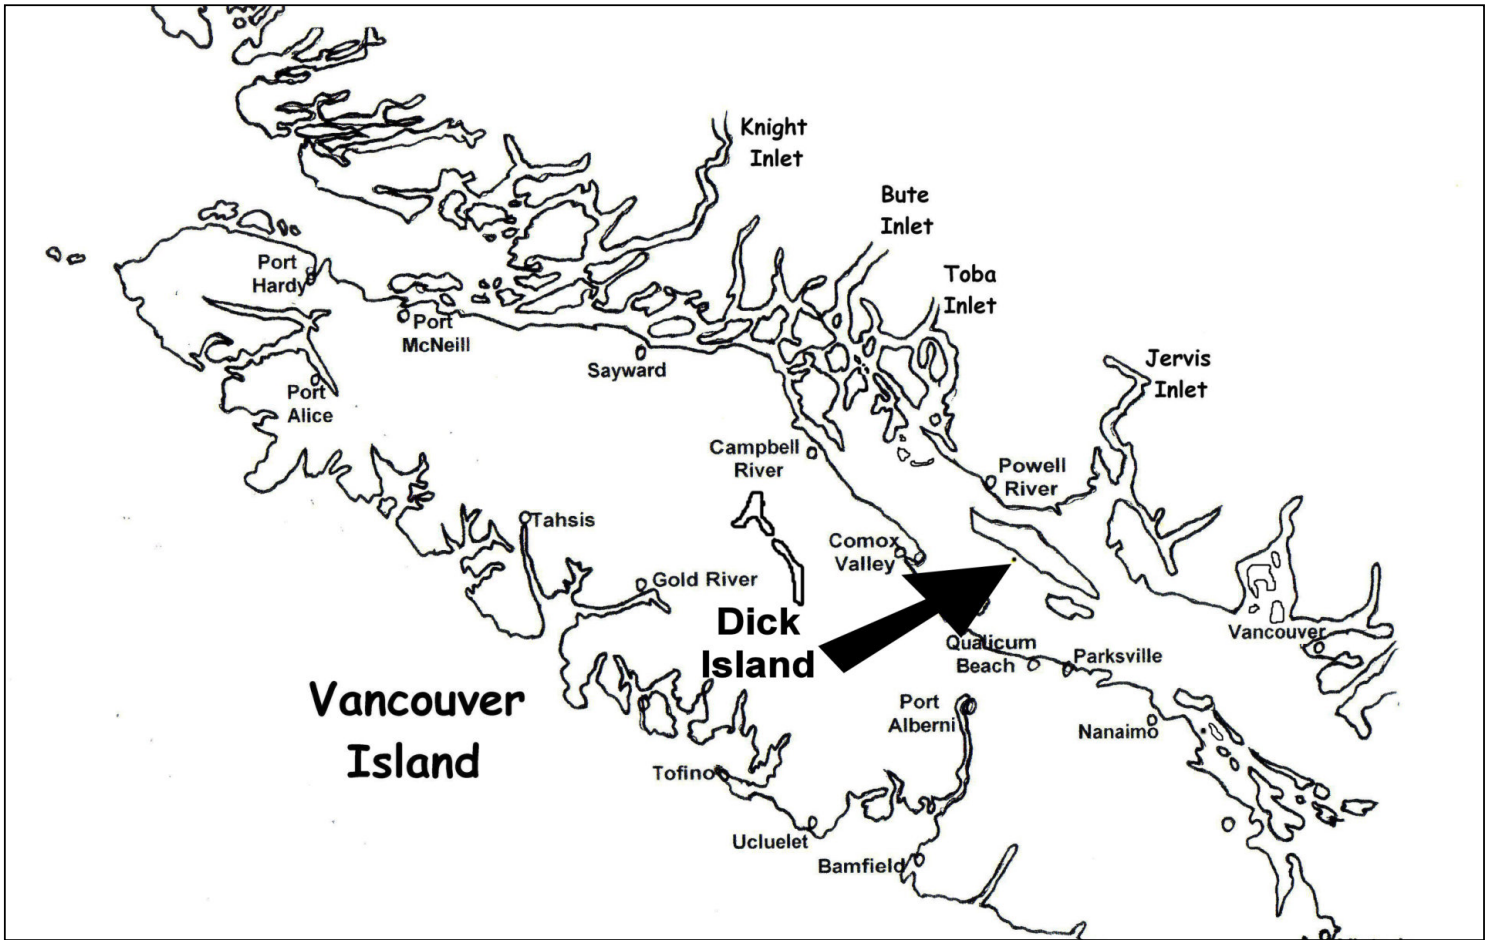

Texada Island is 50km long and has a population of approximately 1,000 residents, most of whom live on the more developed northern half of the island. This is a thriving island community, with a school, community services, health centre, a boat club, shopping amenities and more on the island. Additionally, there are many community groups for various interests and volunteer opportunities, as well as two district improvement areas for the main community hubs in Van Anda and Gillies Bay. The island is connected by BC Ferries to Powell River.

The Powell River region of the Sunshine Coast is a year-round sea to mountain recreation area. On the doorstep of both Vancouver and Vancouver Island, the Powell River region offers an array of experiences for travelers of all kinds, no matter the season along with a stimulating blend of outdoor adventure opportunities for kayaking, canoeing, rock climbing, golfing, boating, hiking, biking, fishing, and scuba diving. Cultural amenities include world-class art galleries, and memorable events and festivals.
